I. Course Overview

In this course I will examine public problems associated with the concept of Public Administration theory with a critical approach. The purpose of the course is to improve your effectiveness as an analyst or researcher about public administration and governments environment by introducing many frameworks from the methodology that are useful for understanding social systems, governments and their environments.

A basic premise of this course is that the needs of high-level students are highly served by a liberal education rather than book-oriented approaches to public administration theories.

Public administration studies methods are classified in the most complicated methods and understanding what the governments are and how they work, have very important impact on effectiveness of every research's style. Concepts that worked well in the past will not necessarily continue well in the future, and theories already helped one type of research plans, may harm other ones. Thus, an effective professional education should teach you how to make good inferences about what will be correct and what will not be in particular situations, and how you can to learn from your own experiences as well as those of others.

Then, your job is to take the concepts you have learned in class and think about how they apply to your own researches and developing your hypothesis or premises about public administration theories.

II. Course Objectives

Like every advanced course that I teach, the general objectives for students are as follow:

- a) To develop the ability to interact with and process the information with a high degree of sophistication;
- b) To develop effective team skills;
- c) To gain effective written and oral communication skills;
- d) To develop the ability to learn independently;
- e) To make continuous improvement during the course.

At the end of this course students should be able to:

- a) To weight the relevance of epistemological approaches to public administration studies.
- b) To identify and explore governmental features and concepts, including structures, systems, institutions, imaginations, public problems, public affairs, public sphere, foreign policies, budgeting, fiscal policy, public finance, cultures and environments which may influence governmental processes;
- c) To point out and discuss how certain theories about public administration can develop;
- d) To learn how you can theorize your experiences and observations about government's actions;
- e) To apply research methods and methodological skills to analysis governmental processes and designing a better type of public administration studies' methods.
- f) To identify governmental structures and processes that may favorably influence the government's performance.
- g) To understand the nature, scope and historical literature of public administration studies;
- h) To understand the variety of academic disciplines that have contributed to the theories and practices of public administration theories;
- i) To see, understand and appreciate theories, facts, events, issues, problems, and alternative solutions from more than a single perspective in relation of public administration studies;
- j) To establishing new methods and research plans to studying and recognizing governmental processes.

V. Procedures and Expectations

1. We expect students to complete assigned readings on time and show up in the class prepared to discuss them. Participation in class discussions is encouraged and expected. Students are encouraged to speak out in class to ask questions and express ideas and opinions. Except under unusual circumstances, assignment grades will be reduced if they are not handed over on time. Assignments are due at the beginning of class on the date indicated. Any assignment turned in after this time is considered late. Late assignments will receive a 50 percent reduction in points awarded.
2. Respecting to Classroom Etiquette is very important. While we disagree with other's ideas, we should respect to them and appreciate our common bond of human dignity. In order to have a positive and safe learning environment, we as a class will have to agree to disagree at times. Some of us may have strong feelings and/or reactions to class materials, readings, etc. Expressing these reactions is encouraged as long as this is done in a respectful manner. Hostile and/or disrespectful behavior is not allowed. In addition, we must be watchful not to take up too much "airtime" and allow for everyone to share. Talking a lot is generally not a good way of actively participating. Instead, carefully listening to others and clearly and concisely expressing your inputs and ideas is the best strategy. Remember to address each other when talking rather than directing your comments to me unless they are solely intended for me.
3. Class attendance is required throughout the semester and on-time attendance is considered mandatory. Coming to class late is a disruption to all members of the class.
4. We can communicate each other easily; please come and visit me during office hours. I am waiting for you to discuss readings, lecture, grading, exams, and classroom behaviors. If you cannot come to scheduled office hours, please let me know and I will work something else out. The best way to reach me is through e-mail or Telegram. I will communicate with the class through email or Telegram. Of course, I expect each of you to check email or Telegram on a daily basis.
5. Academic Ethics are very important! Dishonesty and cheating of any kind will NOT be tolerated. Plagiarism is a particular form of dishonesty that presents the work, ideas, or words of another without attribution as if they were your own. It applies to various tasks, including assignments and papers. When doing written work it is important to cite the original author when your ideas have been developed in previously published or unpublished work.
6. Students must turn off cell phones and beepers during the class time.
7. Students should not bring guests to class unless approved by the instructor.
8. Students should not disrupt class by struggling conversations during the class time.
9. All assignments must be typed or generated by a word processor. Handwritten assignments will not be accepted.
10. Exams will be in essay format. Exam material would include lectures, in-class discussions, and assigned readings. Every effort should be made to attend class on exam day. If an emergency arises, a make-up date may be established (off course if the regulations allow that).

Note that the content of make-up exam will be substantially different than the content of the usual exam.

11. The instructors reserve the right to amend and/or change class policies and procedures.
12. The instructors shall strive to assign grades that are reasonable, accurate reflections of student performance, and fair to other students. The final grade will be allocated between these assignments as follows:

VIII. Guidelines for Papers

Topics: The paper topics should be drawn from any of the Organizational studies areas discussed in the class. You should also choose a Organizational studies issue directly to be addressed in relative class session, but it ought to be related to the issues already discussed and analyzed.

Papers: Write-ups should be about 15 to 25 pages long (Microsoft Word, Single-spaced, Font: Zar, Font Size: 14, Line Spacing: Single, one inch margins). A good write-up would describe the issue, analyze the problems faced, and discuss previous proposals that have been made. Justify your conclusions and clearly discuss your recommendation(s). Succinctness will be rewarded. The papers will be due on exam day.

Note: It is recommended the paper topic to be chosen in tandem with your future long-term interests.

Citation Style for Papers

Embed the reference in the text with the form (author last name, year: page).".." (Scott and Davis, 2007:110).

If the same author has more than one reference in a given year append a letter - a,b,c, - to the year. (Robbins, 2017a; Robbins, 2017b).

You need a bibliography at the end of the paper that gives the full citation for each reference.

The bibliography should be alphabetical by author last name. It takes the form:

For a journal article:

Author last name, first name .year. "Article Title," Journal Name. Vol. No. Pages.

Example:

Pourezzat, Ali Asghar; Mollae, Abdolazim, Firouzabad, Morteza. 2008. "Building the future: Undertaking proactive strategy for national outlook". Futures, 40: 887-892.

For a book:

Author last name, first name .year. Book Title .Publishing City: Publisher.

Example:

Scott, Richard. 1998. Organizations; Rational, Natural and Open Systems. Prentice Hall.

For material in an edited book:

Author last name, first name. year of edited book publication. "Chapter Title," Pages. In Author(s) of edited volume, ed. Title of Book. Publishing City: Publisher.

Example:

Scott, Richard W .1991. "Institutions," 97 – 111 In Powell, W.W. & DiMaggio, P.J. The New Institutionalism in Organizational Analysis. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.
